Paju Bookcity and Asia Publication Culture & Information Center

The Paju Bookcity located at Paju, the head of the Han River and home to Imjingak Pavilion, is the only city in the world that supports book culture by developing the publishing industry and expressing a collectivist spirit along with experts in architecture and environmental art as well as outstanding domestic companies engaging in publication including publishing companies, printing houses, paper companies, and logistics centers.

The Asia Publication Culture & Information Center, the center of Bookcity, is equipped with an auditorium and various small conference rooms including a multi-purpose auditorium, main conference room, and an information library for supporting massive cultural and art activities such as exhibitions, performances, trade fairs, and symposiums.

In addition, its outdoor spaces connecting the buildings, including Asia Square, Event Square and, Water Garden, attract public attention as alternative spaces for creation for artists where Madangguk, a type of traditional Korean performance, concerts, and sculpture exhibits are held, as well as places to rest for the public.

Library Stay JIJHYANG The hometown of paper

Library Stay JIJHYANG means the ‘hometown of paper.’

This contains the spiritual values and meaning of Bookcity where books, the most valuable artworks made by humankind with paper, are brought into the world.

In the guestrooms at JIJHYANG, guests can spend genuine time thinking and meditating through book reading rather than watching TV.

In the first floor lounge is Munbal Salon, a space for reading culture that is open 24 hours.

At ‘Wisdom Forest’, a common area for study at the Asia Publication Culture & Information Center and JIJHYANG, you can see a number of books which have been kept by intellectuals, scholars, researchers, and authors, and published by numerous publishing companies all in the same place.
